To install Computree, first download the version for your system in the Documents section:

- Computree Windows 7/8 64 bits
- Computree Windows 7/8 32 bits
- Computree Ubuntu 12.04 LTS 64 bits
- Computree Ubuntu 14.04 LTS 64 bits

Unzip the archive where you want to install Computree.

To access the download links, you must be logged in as a user!

Completing Installation on Windows

On Windows, just create a shortcut (right click, create a shortcut) to CompuTreeGui.exe executable file.

Completing installation on Ubuntu

Under Ubuntu, creating the shortcut requires a few extra steps (Ubuntu version 13.04 and later).

- 1. Open a terminal (CTRL + ALT + T)
- Go to the installation directory of Computree (use comands cd NomDeRépertoire and cd .. to navigate into the directory hierarchy)
- 3. Type the following command:

sh createlauncher.sh

- 1. This creates a file named computree.desktop
- 2. Open a file explorer and navigate to the installation directory of Computree
- 3. Drag the file computree.desktop into the application launch bar or on the desktop

Otherwise it is always possible to launch Computree directly from a terminal by typing, in the installation directory of Computree, the following command:

sh CompuTreeGui.sh

Under Ubuntu, capital letters are considered separate letters. We must therefore respect the case in typing commands.

Adding plugins

To install plugin not included in the standard installation package:

- 1. Download (and unzip) the plugin library (.dll for Windows, .so for linux, taking care to take the version adapted to your system...)
- 2. Move the library in the /ComputreeInstall/plugins sub directory of the installation folder of Computree :

You must then restart CompuTreeGui for plugins are taken into account (or use Help/About plugins/Reload plugins menu).
